PREFACE

In 1911, the compiler began a classified card catalog of all pictures released and exhibited in this country since 1 January 1910. The next year he compiled from this catalog a "Select List of Educational Subjects Released during the Year 1912," which was published in the Moving Picture World's "Annual and Yearbook," pages 112 to 121. This was followed by the publishing of the educational releases for 1913 in instalments of varying length in different issues of the Moving Picture World. The present volume continues and embodies the results of the criticisms and suggestions made by users of the two previous catalogs. It is in many points a distinct advance on anything of its kind that has yet appeared, but increased use of the catalog, due to the constantly developing field of educational picture work, will undoubtedly suggest many ways to better and render more serviceable succeeding editions, and the compiler will be glad to answer queries or to receive criticism or suggestion from everyone interested.

In the present catalog will be found all pictures, both regular and feature, released in this country between 1 October 1913 and 30 September 1914, that have, so far as careful investigation has been able to ascertain, an educational value. To these have been added a number of pictures, not educational in the strict sense of the term, but having the common characteristic of affording clean, moral, educative entertainment and amusement and therefore educational in the broader and more real sense of the term.

The greatest pains have been taken to make the list complete and accurate in every way, and the thanks of the compiler are due to the manufacturers and others who have rendered him material assistance in his work, especially the Edison, Essanay, Kalem, Pathé, Thanhouser and Vitagraph companies, the Institut International de Bibliographie de Bruxelles, the Library of Congress, the New York State Library at Albany, the New York Public Library, New York City, and the Free Public Library of Newark, N. J., as well as many individual workers in the educational field, too numerous to mention by name.

As an introduction to the catalog, there is reprinted the article on classifying and cataloging pictures which was printed by the compiler in the Moving Picture World of 27 December 1913 (vol. 18, pp. 1554 to 1555).

CATALOGING MOVING PICTURES

The following classification is an abridgment of the "Manuel du Répertoire Bibliographique Universel" of the Institut International de Bibliographie de Bruxelles, commonly called the "Belgian Classification." This in turn, is a scientific development along practical lines of the decimal system of classification used by Melvil Dewey first at Amherst college, and later, in an enlarged form, in the library of Columbia university, and in the New York state library at Albany.

For many reasons it is an ideal method for classifying the pictures. In spite of its seeming complexity, it is simple in construction, is easily learnt and handled, is the result of careful study and practical experiment extending over many years, and in its present form is really the combined opinion of many of the greatest minds in each of the subjects classified as to what is most serviceable, practical and accurate. It is not only free from all the drawbacks and evils inevitable in any "one-man" system; but it has also this crowning excellence for both manufacturer and exhibitor, that a busy man, who knows little and cares less about the intricacies of a strictly logical arrangement, and wants merely a rough and ready method of filing things, so that he can find them again quickly and easily, can, with little trouble, as explained below, use the classification in this way and at the same time reap most of the benefits of the more scientific method.

There is however another method of filing information: namely by dictionary catalogs. This is the method used by the American Library Association and the Library of Congress on the ground that it is the easiest for the ordinary man to consult. Even so, all of their catalogs are prepared by properly qualified experts and when the busy man who has to do his own indexing, tries to make his own dictionary catalog, he is bound to come to grief.

On the other hand, the principles of a class catalog filed by numbers which are decimal fractions are, we might almost say, as easy to master and put into practice as those of a dictionary catalog are difficult; and once learnt enable one to index rapidly and easily with the practical certainty of finding again what is indexed with the least effort.

The Classification

The following pages give the form of such a class catalog with decimal system of notation for filing that has proven itself to be most satisfactory to workers of all kinds.

It consists of three parts, as follows:

1 The classification itself This is given in two forms: a short synopsis (on page 5) for use in rough and ready indexing, and a more detailed form (starting on page 6) for use when the size of the catalog demands it, or by those who wish to make a more minute or as it is technically termed a closer classification. Unless a close classification is desired use only the synopsis on page 5. If at any later time you should wish to classify closer, it can be quickly done by simply adding to the numbers on the cards already indexed the extension of the decimals, using all matter as it stands but with this trifling addition.

2 The decimal system Each topic or subject is given a definite number and all information about a topic is labeled with and filed away under that number. In this way you are always sure of finding all you have on a given subject, even when you file it under one word and, as you will often be apt to do, try to find it later under another name. Trades and handicrafts are two terms whose first letters are separated by about half the alphabet; both, however, refer to the same topic; consequently both words have the same number in the classification which can be found readily by looking up either word in the alphabetic subject-index.

3 The alphabetic subject-index This gives in alphabetic arrangement with its proper file-number opposite every topic mentioned in the classification, and can be used to determine the proper classification.

The Main Divisions

Moving pictures cover practically nearly every branch of human knowledge. Consequently any really practical classification for them must be capable of embracing all knowledge. This is the only way to avoid a division labeled "miscellaneous," so familiar to most beginners in cataloging. This division, which is no "division" at all but merely a trash-basket where the inexperienced cataloger puts everything he does not know what else to do with, gradually gets larger than all the rest of the catalog and makes the indexer quit in despair.

The scheme, here outlined, avoids all this and adds the advantage that you do not have to use subdivisions until you actually need them, but when you do wish it, you can insert them in the proper place for any given topic without interfering in any way at all with any other part of the classification. In other words, work once done is done; it does not have to be undone or to be done over again.

4 The branches of knowledge In the following classification the whole field of human knowledge is regarded as a unit that is divided into ten fractional parts, each of which forms one class, or branch of knowledge. These great general branches of knowledge, under which all particular topics can be classified, are given below. To each has been assigned one of the decimal fractions from .0 (no tenths) to .9 (nine tenths).

ALL KNOWLEDGE	}	(0.0) or 0	General topics
		(0.1) "	1 Philosophy
		(0.2) "	2 Religion
		(0.3) "	3 Sociology
		(0.4) "	4 Philology or Languages
		(0.5) "	5 Natural or Pure Science
		(0.6) "	6 Applied Science
		(0.7) "	7 Fine Arts
		(0.8) "	8 Literature
		(0.9) "	9 History and the historical sciences

5 Decimals written as whole numbers In the above classification we note several things. First, there is no need of using the figure 0, which in the above table signifies all knowledge. We can omit both the figure 0 and also the decimal point that follows and use simply the 0 to represent knowledge in general or general topics, 1 for philosophy, 2 for religion and so on. All we have to remember is that each number is really a decimal fraction or tenth and not a whole number altho it is apparently written as such. In reality we write only the fraction part of the class-number the whole number and the decimal point (0.) which are common to all of the written numbers being understood. Thus, we write 0 instead of 0.0 or .0, 1 instead of 0.1 or .1, etc.

6 Subdivisions Secondly, we see that the class-numbers run from 0 to 9 instead of as in the case of whole numbers from 1 to 10. Consequently, all we have to do in order to make subdivisions is to treat each class exactly as we treated knowledge in general. For example, 7 Fine arts, is made up of such things as architecture, painting, etc. Now Fine arts in general or General topics about the fine arts as a whole will be 7 or .70 and the different kinds of fine arts will form the subdivisions 71 to 79. Thus:

FINE ARTS	}	(.70) or 7	Fine arts as a whole or in general
		(.71) "	71 Landscape art Gardens Sites
		(.72) "	72 Architecture
		(.73) "	73 Sculpture
		(.74) "	74 Design Decoration
		(.75) "	75 Painting
		(.76) "	76 Engraving Illustrating
		(.77) "	77 Photography
		(.78) "	78 Music
		(.79) "	79 Sports and Amusements

In the same way we make subdivisions of every subdivision we wish as in the examples below:

- 7 Fine arts a class of knowledge
- 79 Sports and Amusements a division of fine arts
- 792 Theater The Stage a form of amusement
- 7929 Special kinds of theatrical entertainment
- 79291 Moving picture theaters and exhibitions

Or again:

- 77 Photography one of the fine arts
- 778 Special applications of photography
- 7785 In studying and apparently reproducing motion
- 77853 Kinematography The making of moving pictures

7 Alfabetic headings In actual practice there is generally no necessity for such minute or, as it is technically termed, close classification. The cameraman or operator, for example, would probably use all of the subdivisions of 77 Photography; the exhibitor can probably file all he has under the heads, kinematography and trick pictures. The exhibitor therefore, will find it more useful not to subdivide 77, and will label his cards of that subject either 77 - kinematography or 77 - trick and file both names under 77. If he wishes later on to file by the decimal subdivisions instead of the names, he has only to cross out the filing word, add the proper number for the name and file accordingly.

8 Arrangement of the numbers Being decimal fractions, the class-numbers are arranged, not according to the number of figures in a number, but according to the value of each figure, beginning at the left. Thus, 77 comes between 7 and 8, the arrangement being just like that of the words in a dictionary.

9 Use of the period In the classification as printed, many of the numbers contain a period. This is not a decimal point but merely a mark to divide the number into sections, in the same way that we use a hyphen to split up a word into syllables. Thus 77.853 and 792.91 are much more easily read and recognized than 77853 and 79291.

The Common Subdivisions

Under the divisions, Literature and History are given certain tables called common subdivisions because they can be used to subdivide any of the class-numbers of the classification. Thus, 39, Manners & Customs can be subdivided for different countries like history and geography by means of the place-table that subdivides history, and for different races or peoples by the language-table given under 8, Literature. Division 4, Philology or Language, is omitted from the classification as printed because not needed for the pictures. If any one has a use for it, the subdivisions are made like those of Literature.

Rules for Cataloging

Get a card-file box, also some ruled cards and a set of index or guide cards, having tabs rising above the top edge for one-fifth the length of the card.

Take ten of the guide-cards, turn them so the blank side of the tab faces you, and then write on each tab a single number, beginning with zero and ending with nine. On the body of each card write the name of the main division that corresponds to the number on the tab. If you wish, you can omit 4, Languages, and use only nine guides.

Next, take the ruled record cards, and rule a vertical or perpendicular line for the whole length of the card, about one inch from the left hand edge. You can buy cards already ruled in this way, if you ask for cards with "library ruling."

Now suppose you want to index under "Children's-stories," Selig's Their Stepmother, released 2 May 1913. Look up the class-number for "Children's-stories," either in the classification or in the subject-index. Opposite the name in both places you will find the number 087.1. This is the class-number. If you looked it up in the classification, you saw it was a subdivision of 08 Collections and Series, and that this in turn was a subdivision of 0 General topics.

Now take one of your record-cards and, on the top line and to the left of the vertical line, write this number, 087.1; and to the right of the vertical line put the title of the picture. On the second put the maker's name, the character of the picture and the release date, and on the lines below any notes you wish. Here is our own card for this picture. The abbreviations give the volume and page of the MOVING PICTURE WORLD on which are the synopsis (Syn), comment (Com) and a special review (sp.rev); the volume before, the page after the colon.

087.1	Their Stepmother
	Selig drama 2 My 1913
	Syn. 16:406 Com. 16:704
	sp.rev. 16:1123
	A quaint, charming story on a child's idea of a stepmother gained from her reading a fairy tale

Note that the space to the left of the vertical line is reserved for your filing marks. In the examples given above (§ 7) you would put 77 on the top line and write "trick" on the second line. This makes filing and reference easy.

Now take your finished card and file it behind the guide marked 0 and you have finished your cataloging of that picture. Do the same thing for every picture you wish to catalog and file each card by the first figure of the class-number.

10 Subdividing the catalog Until you have to, don't. Say however you have quite a number of cards behind guide 3 Sociology. They belong to two or three different subdivisions but they are mixed up together under the one main division.

Take the cards from behind guide 3 and rearrange them according to the first two figures of their class-numbers, i.e. putting in separate piles all 32's, all 33's etc. You will probably have quite a number marked 35 and 39, and a few scattered among the other subdivisions.

Take two guide cards, and on the tab of one write 35 and on the tab of the other, 39; on the body of each guide write the name of the subdivision. Lastly, file these new guides in your box between guides 3 and 4 or, if you have omitted 4, between 3 and 5.

Now put the cards whose class-numbers are 35 and 39 behind their respective guides, and put the remaining cards together between guide 3 and guide 35. When you get enough cards under 3 to warrant it you can make more subdivisions, but until then the few entries you have are just as readily filed or found under sociology in general.

Finally, do not worry, if at first you do not understand. Follow the rules, and the method will explain itself.

If you have any difficulty, query the CATALOG SECTION of the MOVING PICTURE WORLD

Subject and Cross-Reference Index

Opposite each name in the index will be found the catalog number under which all pictures illustrating that topic will be found. The index includes all subject headings used in the catalog; all the synonyms of these headings that have been found by experience to be in common use; all of the common subdivisions of language and place used in the catalog; and all duplicate cross-references to pictures that would otherwise have been cataloged two or more times because they illustrated two or more subjects.
